

Editors' Picks: 21 Things Not to Miss in New York's Art World This Week

From Roe Ethridge's Gagosian debut to Sarah Slappey's surreal nudes, here's the best of what the city has to offer this week.

Sarah Cascone, February 24, 2020

Each week, we search New York City for the most exciting, and thought-provoking, shows, screenings, and events. See them below.

Ronny Quevedo, un contador de latitudes (a keeper of latitudes), 2019. Photography by Charles Benton. Courtesy of Foxy Production, New York.

16. "Metallica" at Foxy Production

Don't get the wrong idea: this is not a show about James Hetfield, Lars Ulrich, or anyone else behind the making of Master of Puppets. Instead, this compelling group exhibition takes its name from the 16th-century text De Re Metallica (On the Nature of Metals) and features three artists who have mastered metals in very different ways. LaKela Brown creates fossil-like plaster impressions of jewelry from hip-hop's first generation; ektor garcia makes beguiling mixed-media sculptures in which metals weave into, or disguise themselves as, other materials entirely; and Ronny Quevedo uses gold and silver leaf to highlight the value of pragmatic yet culturally significant patterns and forms from the histories of indigenous peoples. In total, the results are visually and intellectually rich.

Location: Foxy Production, 2 East Broadway, #200 Price: Free Time: Wednesday–Sunday, 11 a.m.–6 p.m.

—Tim Schneider